NATURE OF EMERGING WORLD ORDER
INTRODUCTION

- The end of the Bi-Polar order and the establishment of Uni-Polar order, the growing importance of the economic factors, end of the balance of power system, popularity of Globalization, Liberalization and privatisation, decline in the credibility of international organisation and the demand of democratising the United Nations and to bring transparency in its working protection of Human rights, the issues of the environmental pollution, the global spread of terrorism and the going period of economic recession in the world and the concern of international community to these issues and the steps towards the establishment of multi-polar system etc. are some of the important characteristics of the nature of the emerging new world order.
CHARACTERISTICS OF THE NATURE OF EMERGING WORLD ORDER

1. Establishment of American Hegemony
2. Set back to the system of Balance of Power
3. Only one Military Alliance – NATO
4. Declining credibility of United Nations
5. Demand for the restructuring of the United Nations
6. American Dominance over International Financial Institutions
7. Establishment of the World Trade Organisation
8. Globalisation
9. Liberalisation
10. Privatization
11. Dominant role of Multi-National Corporations
12. Global spread of Information Technology
13. Interdependence of Developed and developing Countries
14. Growing popularity of Economic Organizations
15. Non-Alignment Movement-In search of new role
17. Change in the extreme nature of Communism.
18. Issue of the Protection of Environment
19. Globalisation of Terrorism
20. Efforts towards the unification of Europe
21. India, an emerging Power
22. Steps towards the establishment of multi-polar world.
23. Establishment of G-20 as an important Economic Group.
We come to the conclusion that during the last 20 years revolutionary change have taken place in international Politics which have completely changed the nature of world order. Since the middle of 20th century till the beginning of the last decade of it, the world remained hostage to the conditions which emerged as a result of cold war and the possibilities of the World war always kept looming over the world. The clash between the two super powers of the world had excelerated the race of armament and the poor and developing countries also became the victims of it. But as a result of the end of cold war the international tensions were reduced. The era of Globalisation, Liberalisation and Privatisation had began, economic and development over military development was given preference the former military powers were replaced by Economic powers of today etc.
REFERENCES